

Paranormal Puzzle

Author: Robert Kreuk

There's a lot of paranormal puzzles out there. Sightings and stories are released daily on websites and in news publications everyday giving us more and more questions to try and solve.

Every weird event or encounter has it's own fine details too. How tall were the aliens? How fast was the UFO traveling? Was there any hair left at the Bigfoot sighting? How many witnesses were there? Who were some of the sailors in the Philadelphia Experiment? What scientists were involved?

Maybe these are just pieces to the puzzle. Whether the subject is time travel or telekenesis they are not the whole puzzle themselves, but part of something bigger? Without a doubt there is more paranormal research now going on than there's ever been. Most seem to be specialists honing in on ghosts or aliens or mysterious creatures, and fewer of them are trying to find connections to prove their existence outside of our own modern science. As a community we probably have it figured out, but we just can't see the whole picture because of investigations into things that seem unrelated and their researchers are not communicating with other researchers to see if they have overlap and notes to compare.

Some paranormal subjects have things in common with other paranormal subjects. Whether they can help prove or disprove other areas is debatable, but connections and commonalities are there. So, for all you of that like thinking outside the box, what if it's all connected?

Maybe the biggest paranormal puzzle of them all might be what the entire picture looks like when we take a step back.
